

Collaborative Applications from Logicalis optimize workforce productivity, improve customer responsiveness, and save time and money.

Collaborative Applications

Collaboration is a good idea that used to cost a lot of money and take a lot of time. In the increasingly decentralized corporation, co-workers are scattered all over the country, if not the globe. Just arranging a conference call can be a full-time job for some administrative people. The net result: Many good ideas have gone unexecuted without collaboration.

Today, Logicalis can help you implement real-time collaboration capabilities. Our collaborative applications include a complete multimedia conferencing solution that fully integrates voice, video, and Web capabilities to make collaboration around the world as spontaneous as gathering around the proverbial office water cooler.

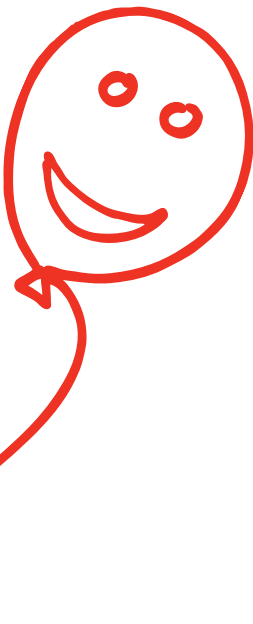

Not only can you connect to the call from any device at any time, you also have the capability to upgrade the call to a video conference with the click of a mouse. You can review, update, and share files interactively more easily than if you were merely sitting across a conference table.

Collaborative Applications provides an instant environment for work sessions, training sessions, sales presentations, contract review sessions, and brainstorming sessions of all kinds.

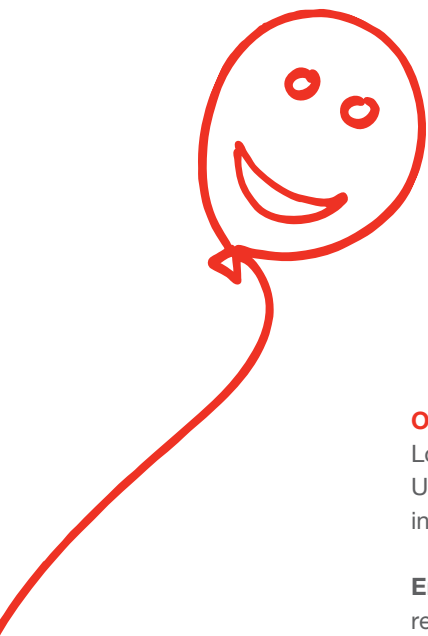

One major manufacturer estimates saving more than 20 percent on its annual travel budget by using collaboration technologies to enable employees to work together more efficiently and effectively from anywhere in the world.
